Fliers Report Towns Are Totally Destroyed

By H. J. Maidenberg

LIMA, Peru, June 2-The magnitude of the disaster caused by last Sunday's earthquake in northern Peru became more evident today as the government officially placed the estimated death toll

The estimate was given reluctantly by Augusto Zimmerman, chief of the National Office of Information, this morning at the Presidential Palace here, under sharp questioning by many Peruvian newsmen, a number of whose editors were reportedly bitter over the disclosure of the estimate and related data by the government to foreign embassies late yesterday. Some of Mr. Zimmerman's aides were said to have minimized the death total to calm the public and ease the overtaxed telephone and road systems in the northern prov-

In Lima the quake, which started at 3:24 p.m. Sunday, caused five deaths, four of them attributed to heart attacks. There was little physical damage to buildings, but panic sent more than 200 to hospitals with nerve and cardiac troubles, city health officials said.

Texan to Display Vietnam Prisons In Capitol Crypt

WASHINGTON, June 2 (UPI),-A congressional committee has given Texas millionaire H. Ross Perot permission to build replicas of North Vietnamese prisoners-of-war cells in the crypt of the U.S. Capitol, to show tourists and congressmen what the prisoners go through.

Mr. Perot has helped run an organization trying to get the Communists to give more facts about American prisoners and to treat them more humanely. The organization, "United We Stand," will set up a bamboo cage, an isolation cell, a tree with manacles, and an earthen pit in the Capitol crypt.

The replicas "mirror authentically descriptions provided by American servicemen who were prisoners and later were released or escaped," Rep. Clement J. Zablocki said. The replicas will be unveiled Thursday.

Bank Cameras Trap 'Dashing Dan,' Accused of 20 Holdups in N.Y.

NEW YORK, June 2 (NYT).—An alleged bank robber, dubbed Dashing Dan by the Federal Bureau of Investigation for his mannerly method of dealing with tellers, was arrested outside his Queens home yesterday, less than an hour after he reportedly held up another bank—his 30th in three months.

FBI agents and Queens detectives were waiting for the suspect,

44-year-old Raphael Paviz, when he stepped out of a taxi at 2:05 p.m. near his apartment building in Jamaica. N.Y.

The police said they found $1,910 in the suspect's possession—the exact amount taken in a holdup at the Bankers' Trust Company branch at 345 Park Avenue at 1:20 p.m. Mr. Pavia was un-armed and offered no resistance, the police said.

The authorities had known for some time what the suspect looked like. Pictures taken of the robber by hidden cameras during nesrly all of the 20 bank holdups in the metropolitan area had made him one of the most photographed suspects in

Mr. Pavia, described as an immigrant from Tunisia who has been working here as a bartender, was booked on a charge of robbing tha Chase Manhattan Bank branch in Jamaica, N.Y., on March 4-the first in the series of holdups, which the FBI said had netted a total of more than $35,000.

The single charge, upon conviction, carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

In nearly all of the attempted robberies, according to tha FBI, Dashing Dan used the same methods, handing a note to the teller demanding only large-denomination bills. The notes always said the holdup man had a gun pointing toward the teller, but none of the tellers ever saw him holding a gun or any other

The suspect was given the name Dashing Dan by the FBI because of his politeness and because of the speed with which he allegedly moved from one bank to another on days when a

Human and Natural Violence

To a world so obsessed as today's with the deeds of man against man, nature can give a warning. While police in Argentina were combing the country for the kidnappers and presumptive murderers of former President Arambury, the Andes, that restless range that borders Argentina, merely shrugged. Yet perhaps 30,000 Peruvians died, and the devastation in the highlands was monumental. Behind the fogs that shroud the autumnal landscape, the flooded streams and landslips that har access to the stricken region, one can merely sense an awesome tragedy.

Human institutions and human malice did not cause this tragedy; indeed, the institutions are mustering their strength to assist, all around the world. Those institutions are capable of simple compassion, and they do have a high degree of efficiency in rendering help. They form one side of the coin of present-day civilization.

But if there is a lesson in the blind, amoral, inhuman force that struck down such a wide area of Peru, and in the way in which the nations rallied to aid, it is one that man seldom heeded in the past. Moreover, the heedlessness carries its own

Less than a generation ago it was possible to say that man could not compete with nature's earthquakes, eruptions, floods storms and plagues in destructiveness. But now, with hydrogen bombs, man can duplicate the worst excesses of nature on the rampage. More, the mere mess of humanity, with the devices it has made to sustain itself. and give material comforts, threatens to repeat those slower processes of the earth's evolution-the gladers, the changes of climate, the raising or lowering of sea bottoms-that altered the conditions of life over whole continents, and destroyed whole species that could not adept.

And man is creating these conditions rather faster than nature has done, spreading them wider, complicating them with ideologies and intricate sets of fears and aspirations. In much, man has ameliorated the harsh conditions imposed by his environment, so that cities grow on the tundra. and in the desert, and in the jungle. The process, however, has set up new trains of consequences, man-made, yet apparently beyond man's ability to confront.

When little fur-clad bands began to follow the wake of the learning by trial and error how to live under stark conditions, with new diets, new methods of hunting, they showed-at what cost in lives and hardship can only be guessed—the adaptability and, as discussed in a previous of their kind. Now, with a wealth of technology, man must prove himself again; prove that he can adapt to his own species and what it has wrought in the environment. He may not yet be able to arrest, or even accurately foretell, an earthquake. Bot he can opt for something short of mass

Spanish Bases: The Dilemma Is Still There

Secretary Rogers's visit to Madrid did not resolve the differences between the United States and Spain over extension of their agreement on military bases. A communique issued at the conclusion of the secretary's conference with Foreign Minister Gregorio Lopez Bravo indicated that progress toward an accord had been made. Reports of an impasse persist, however, and if the demands currently attributed to Generalissimo Franco's government are accurate, it is difficult to see how any acceptable arrangement can emerge, Spain is said to be asking a security commitment that would require the United States to defend that country in the event of an attack. If no such American guarantee can be attained, it is said. Spain will insist upon a massive military weapons program. The first alternative would require a treaty, and there is precious little chance that two thirds of the Senate would consent to such commitment. Only a majority of both houses would be required to approve an aid program, but even such an indirect underwriting of the Spanish cause would-and should-be viewed with ekepticism, if not hostility, on Capitol Hill.

Aside from the fact that a security agreement with Franco Spain would be obnoxious to many of our NATO allies and to a great body of American citizens, this is no time to be extending our commitments abroad in any area. The country is looking to the Nixon administration for a retrenchment rather than expansion of our global role. The overextension in Vietnam and more recently Cambodia has rolled up powerful demands for closer scrutiny of our guarantees to other countries.

It is said that military bases in Spain have become more important to us since the original agreement was negotiated in 1953.

The closing of the Air Force base at Wheelos. Libya, has caused the Pentagon to put a larger premium on the air bases at Torrejon and Saragossa in Spain, Likewise, the expansion of Soviet naval forces in the Mediterranean has made the Navy reluctant to give up its nuclear submarine base at Rota. But are the military advantages that would flow from an extension of the agreement with Spain sufficient to offset the diplomatic disadvantages that would result from another agreement with Franco at a time when the United States is supposed to be consolidating its resources and tailoring its commitments to current domestic realities?

Officials have denied any lobbying at the NATO meeting in Rome to get Spain admitted to that defensive setup. But even a limited security arrangement between this country and Spain tends to bring indirect tool of Peking, had locked up quite pressure on our NATO allies. That is an un- a few of his own political enemies. sentimental hankering for America fortunate position for Washington to be in. the use of Spanish soil should necessary for the defense of Europe, let the European countries take the lead in adjusting their relations to Spain. The United States should not be trying, even in an indirect way, to sneak Spain into NATO under our wing by a private bilateral deal

It is difficult to see, therefore, how any satisfactory quid pro quo can be given for continued use of the Spanish bases, Certainly the United States should not be straining to keep these bases in use. Costly though it would be to close them, it might well prove to be the least expensive course in the long run. In no circumstances should the military argument for clinging on be allowed to overshadow the general necessity for redefining our global responsibilities in terms less grandiose than those which prevailed in the

It is still entirely possible that recent developments over Cambodia will turn out to mark the biggest Communist setback in Indochina since the French left that territory. The most remarkable aspect has been the efficiency and dash shown by the South Vietnamese forces.

Hanoi has always regarded Indochina as one arena, making use freely of Laotian and Cambodian territory to pursue the war in Vietnam. The change of government in Phnom Penh, and President Nixon's bold decision subsequently for the joint American-South Vietnamese operations, have meant that the Communists are now being fought at their own game and under the ground rules which they themselves onesidedly applied.

Smash Up, Pay Up

. Though the barricades were out in the streets, the latest clash between demonstrators and police in Paris was not the popular uprising it appeared to be. It was, as these things go, a etrictly limited affair, despite all the violence it occasioned.

The Proletarian Left, the extremist group which provoked the rioting, apparently proceeded on the calculation that if they went for the police, the police in turn would hit back at the public in general, and in the ensuing fracas their own revolutionary cause would somehow gain momentum,

Some members of the government . . want to take a tough line with student dissidents and other trouble makers. The latest clash may well be adduced as a new and compelling reason for pushing the proposed anti-riot bill through parliament.

The government claims that the bill is designed to curb violence, and make the Republicans to organize the Senpeople who smash up pay up. Yet, unpleasant though the extreme left may be, the latest series of incidents needs to be seen in perspective. As a whole France is remarkably stable. "Paying up" should not be at the expense of civil liberty.

It is not sufficient to underscore erroneous ideas often held by U.S. public and opposition leaders, although these do indeed produce a powerful effect. The horror is, of course, compounded because Vietnam is the first televised war with blood spread through parlors and kit-

The American tragedy is that everyone discussing Vietnam argues more with his heart than his brain, with more passion than reason, regardless of which side he endorses, hawk or dove. Moreover, Nixon has clearly failed in the vital task of explaining to public opinion a sufficiently cogent case to gain the requisite support. No conflict can be fought by a democracy if it is not accepted by those called upon to do the fighting.

relief at the White House, not. when the stock market recovered, heard around the world. No president, naturally, wants a serious recession. But this particular President never thinks of the state of the economy without also thinking of the 1970 election.

He has even been known to say that he 'has heard of many candidates defeated by recessions, but never of one beaten by an infla-tion"—which explains the reflationary steps he had already begun to take before the stock mar-ket got into trouble. And this points to a fact that has had far too little attention: the fact that Richard M. Nixon is serving as his party's working leader in a way that none of his recent predecessors has ever attempted.

It will not matter a pin, of course, if the market gets into further trouble and there really is a ion. In that event, as every White House staff member admits, all the President's efforts will be wasted. The Democrats will then do very well in the off-year

Byrd Candidacy

But as matters stand, it is well worth pointing out that there is a lot more going on in the woodwork, so to say, than the unwary Democrate seem to imagine. Take Virginia, for instance, where Sen. Harry F. Byrd jr. has abandoned the Democratic party to run as an independent.

Virginia is so vividly interesting because the Republicans can make a double gain there. In other words, if Sea. Byrd is reelected, and then votes with the ate, this will mean a lost Damocratic vote as well as a Republican vote gained. The question in Virginia is, first. whether the Republicans will enter ing in a liberal Democrat. A lot of Republicans, excited by their success in electing Gov. Linwood C. Holton, are eager to go on the principle of "Damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead." Gov. Holton has been among them. The President himself has therefore talked with the governor. Much work has been done by the two men more directly in charge, Sen. John Tower, head of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, and the able national be that when the votes are countchairman, Rep. Rogers Morton. ed, the White House will be Gov. In that event, it is already known that he will vote as a Republican in the Senate, if his sole vote does not make all the difference. Here, of course, the problem is the senator's reluctance to be responsible for throwing his father's old friends on the Democratic side out of their committee chairmanships.

All the same, there is a significant chance that when the crunch comes, and even if the Senate is divided 50-50, the President will make the double wain of Sen Byrd's vote on his side. That is only one sample of what has been happening, moreover. In Indiana, for instance, the Republican organization has been split wide open by a fight over the Senate

The President assigned his extremely astute staff member, Mur-ray Chotiner, to handle Indiana. It now appears that instead of a fearful party fight, Rep. Richard Roudebush will be almost unantmously nominated. In that case, the seat of the liberal Democrat. Sen. Vance Hartke, may be in real dando for themselves, such as searching for locally winning issues, is also being done in the White House nowadays—though not, of course, by the President himself. Thus the Republican incumbent, Sen. Ralph T. Smith, is going to have an uphill fight in Illinois against Adlai Stevenson 3d. But it has been discovered that Mr. Stevenson's stand against the trial of "the Chicago Seven" is highly unpopular with the Illinois voters, so this is due to be a main theme in the Illinois campaign.

Uphill Fight Work that candidates normally

Add that the President already their own candidate against Sen. has an excellent chance of getting Byrd, thereby splitting the con-Republican sensions from Ohio servative vote and probably bring- and Texas, where there were liberal Democratic senators before. ington is a good deal less interesting than the private discussions that are taking place among men in power. In that category, no question is more poignant in human terms nor more profound in its consequences for the country than the simple but fundamental decision whether to leave or remain in public service.

House Speaker John W. McCormack provided a recent example of the positive value of the timely exit. His decision not to seek re-election allowed his colleagues in Congress, and particularly his fellow Democrats, to honor him last week for the achievements of last week for the achievements of his career, rather than continuing to plot his removal and repudia. The question in simple terms, is tion—which many would have felt prof. Hirschinan is far too thoughtnecessary had he not taken the ful to suggest that there is an step he did.

More agonizing are the decisions now being debated behind closed office doors and in the privacy of homes by a number of men high in the executive branch, who find themselves strongly opposed to one or more of the major policies of the Nixon administration. Some subcabinet officials and White House staff members have left already, with varying degrees of publicity. But the resignation that have occurred are small in significance compared to the number and rank of the men who are still weighing the decision.

Harvard University Press.

- Written by a Harvard political economist named Albert O. Hirschman, it bears the intendating and not very revealing title, "Exit, Voice and Loyalty."

In just over 100 pages of closely reasoned text, Prof. Hirschman examines the conditions that can and should determine an individual's response to increasing dissatisfaction with a product, or-

Despite his general caution, he does argue that in the special case of American government officials, the "exis" option, the principled resignation, has been used less often than is desirable. The threat of exit, he notes, increases the eflectiveness of voice or dissent within the government. A resignation is, in a sense, an unanswerable

Pulling Teeth

Disuse of this option, he suggests, has made it easy for the head of government to ignore the critics within the organization. As critics within the organization. As a result, American presidents have become rather too skillful in pulling the teeth of the "in-house" opponents of some policy, while publicly putting on a great show of tolerating dissent.

Prof. Hischman acknowledges that there are severe psychological and institutional barriers to the principled resignation from a high government post. It is easy for an official to persuade himself that his continued presence may prevent the worst even if he can no longer achieve what he thinks And in America, the man who leaves the government risks losing all his influence. In England, a cabinet member who resigns returns immediately to his place in Parliament. But a Walter Hickel might find himself back in Anchohis voice from there?

Weighing all these considera-tions, Prof. Hirschman still suggests that men in power might take seriously the "bumper-strip commandment" and decide that that which they no longer love, they should leave.

In the first place, let it be once more made clear (although Mgr. Escriva who founded it in 1928 has made it abundantly clear in numercus interviews with American, Spanish and other journalists) that the aims of Opus Del are purely spiritual. The objective of its members is the sanctification of themselves and others through their ordinary daily work, be they cabinet ministers, businessmen, manual workers or housewives. But it must be made equally clear that every activity in which its members engage, whether in politics, business, art, science or manual labor, is undertaken with complete freedom and under their own responsibility; and Opus Del, save in the case of its few corporate works such as schools and training centers, claims no share in either the success or failure of any such undertakings,

Many people lay the endless Rorean war at the doorstep of the United States. The United States installs, supports, and encourages repressive regimes throughout the world. It has bombed and desiroyed with total lack of discrimination the entire Indochinese peninsula. It has a record of domestic and external violence, a readiness to use excessive force, that makes the Soviet Union, in spite of Hungary and Czechoslovakia, look like a petty German principality of the 18th century. The Soviet Union did not employ herbicide and cultural genocide on a weak little country 10,

These indications suggest that the United States should be feared by any rational man, and the foreign policy of the United States for the past 25 years has been to make itself more feared than the Soviet Union. It has been a roaring success and has led many European to believe that the United State cannot be trusted with the mor massive arsenal of atomic and conventional weapons in human his tory. These Europeans may be mistaken, but the mistake has been inculcated by a series of presiden from Harry Trumen on : The trouble with the United States is that it has a bad for eign policy that works.

what makes this 747 an Air France 747: ndid French cooking, set off by the choicest s and liqueurs of the country - and if you to temper your appetite between meals, there's a tempting running buffet! Room to stretch and move around. Wider than wide-screen colour movies*. Music at will to relax or dream by.

And of course, that indefinable ambiance that is Paris- and AIR FRANCE movies*. Music at will to relax or dream by.

The great switch is working

Top men have already switched and many more are in the process of switching to HG. Why? Two basic reasons, IIG is the fastest growing financial company in the world and we offer a sound and secure future. . . NOW We seek more Sales Executives. To these important men we offer the highest non-reducing commission on all new and switched business for THE REAL ESTATE FUND OF AMERICA and THE FUND OF THE SEVEN SEAS. In addition, we have the American Plan. Every year your client's money stays in the fund we pay you 1% on it.

It costs your client nothing to switch (all IIG funds are no-loud). Also we offer you an optional 10% guarantee from a minimum capital investment of $5,000.

People with IIG make money. That is the name of our - MONEY. Salesmen all over the world from every fund possible are continuing to switch to IIG and have brought to us already millions of dollars in switches. They know their customers. They know what they have bought. They know what their monatary position is. They know their dissatisfaction and now they are ready to switch. THERE IS NO STOPPING THE GREAT SWITCH.

Are you, as a salesman and a manager, ready to switch to IIG products - THE REAL ESTATE FUND OF AMER-ICA and THE FUND OF THE SEVEN SEAS? Are you one of these top sales executives we are looking for? With the American Plan, if you can sell $1,000,000 worth of IIG funds, you will receive $10,000 per year, as long as your client's money remains invested.

The diagramed deal showed that a strong six-card major suit was likely to be the best choice as trump even when a four-four fit was available in the other major suit. At one table, a contract of four hearts was reached and the opening lead was a dismond. With the closed hand forced to ruff immediately. there was no obvious way to handle the four-one trump division and the contract failed. It can apparently be made double-dummy by not touching trumps. When the hand was re-played, a pair on the winning team bid the hand as shown in the diagram. The heart fit was discovered, but subsequently rejected: South recognized the importance of having his strong six-card major as trump. The opening lead was again a diamond, but the weaken-ing of the South hand was now less important, although still inconvenient. The winning play at this point was to pull trump, making the reasonable assumption that the spades would break no worse than two-two. South has only one trump left at this point, but he cannot be prevented from mak-ing four tricks in the side suits for a total of 10. He leads a club, preferably the ten, and the defense must hold up the prevent South from making three clubs. But after making two club tricks, South turns his attention to hearts, and cannot do worse than end up with six spade tricks, two clubs and two hearts.

In practice, South failed to see any urgency about pulling trumps. He led a club to dummy's king and finessed the jack. He might have survived this misplay but for the fact that West could tell from the bidding that his partner held a singleton heart. He therefore returned a heart for his partner to ruff, and regained the lead with the club ace to give his partner another heart ruff to set the contract.

THE EXPERIENCE OF NOTHINGNESS By Michael Novak, Harper & Row. 160 pp. 25.95.

Reviewed by Charles Frankel

HERE is a vigorously written book by a philosopher of the rising generation which there is or isn't anything bemakes the effort to explore the current mood of alienation and disorientation, to speak for that mood, and to go beyond it to the expression of an ideal which might turn this mood from a purely negative one into an aifirmative program.

Michael Novak is in tune with the style and themes of the socalled counter-culture that is rising among us. He is passionate; he it unbending in his scorn for what exists; he wants to recover individuality, human warmth, and a sense of Durpose in life from the ravages of a war-oriented public policy and a runaway technology. He is also unapologetically subjective Like a good many other spokes-men for the new "revolutionary consciousness," Novak speaks for the rights of idiosyncrasy but makes sweeping pronouncements about what is good for every-body. He takes his point of departire from political and social problems, but his basic concerns are psychological, even mystical, and his basic proposal is for a form of religious conversion, Novak has not written the usual stylish book announcing the new radical consciousness. He recognizes that the "counterculture" is in many ways the mirror image of the materialism, hedonism and egoism it loathes. And though he says that the Twist was an important event in American cultural history because it gave expression to a richer, more liberated sense of the relation of body to mind, feeling to thought, ha nevertheless argues his case in an orderly, intellectual fashion. Novak is a philosopher, not a

His thesis is that all sound thinking about our present sit-uation must begin with a recog-nition that "the experience of nothingness? is the primal experience of man. In the bore-dom of ordinary human beings, in the allenation and revulsion felt by sensitive spirits at what exists, we have inhimations of the nature of this experience. And the process of radical cul-tural criticism takes us to the very borders of the realization of nothingness.

We start with nothing, and we make everything up-our science and art, our politics, our belief in objectivity, our sense of selfhood. There is no structure in the universe except the structures which men in their illusions create. There is only a surrounding nothingness. Yet in this vertiginous encounter with nothingness we can also discover and reasert the human essence, and thus find, in and through nihilism itself, a victory over nihilism.

Does Novak make sense? must begin by reviving an in-excusably neglected rule of book reviewing and tell the reader that I am among the writers whom Novak attacks in his book. So it will be no surprise that I do not find Novak's ar-guments persuasive. They seem to me an effort, quite literally, to make something out of nothing. If men cannot see the world except through the hind these myths? And if a man says that nothing is be-hind them, then how do we experience this nothing? Indeed, what is an experience of nothing? I should think it was a non-experience. To affach the substantive suffix "ness" to the word "nothing" is a verbal snare which does not convert a negative into an affirmative. If you go into a room and don't find anything, you can report this by saying that what you found was the presence of nothing, but putting it this way doesn't mean that you found anything. This is not a mere semantic quibble. Novak draws important conclusions from what I think are his tricks with words. He holds, for example, that the be-lief in science and reason is responsible for the cold, cruelly inhuman technological civiliza-tion that exists, and he believes that the root error in the belief in reason is its neglect of the significance of the experience of nothingness. It seems to me that Novak is refuting a straw man. Novak nowhere considers in his book the simple possibility that our present chaotic situation may be due not to the excesses of reason but to the unwillingness of men to use it when their egos and their deepest interests are involved. Nor does he ask whether, in his preference for the subjective and the instructual, he is not in-advertently endorsing the very evils he seeks to condemn.

Of course, it can be said that all this is merely the statement of my prejudices in opposition to Novak's, since, after all, objectivity fiself is an illusion. But I think this is wrong. Consider, for example, what is in-volved in the simple rule that a reviewer should caudidly avow the fact that he begins from premises quite different from those of the author he is review-ing. This is, I think, a condition for his being fair to author and reader, and I strongly suspect that Novak would agree, But it he does, then he has not really rejected the ideal of objectivity, for without that ideal he would have no grounds for criticizing anyone for unfair criticism.

Admittedly, objectivity is an extraordinarily hard ideal to achieve. But this does not de-stroy its validity as an ideal. Novak's own effort to persuade by marshaling arguments and appealing to evidence indicates that he thinks that he too, is doing something more than expressing his prejudices. He is saying that his point of view is right in terms of independent standards, just as I am appealing to such standards in replying to him. So he has paid his movilling tribute to reason, and is not quite the apostle of nothingness that he says he is More power to him.

Charles Frankel is projessor of philosophy at Columbia Uni-versity. His latest-book is "High on Foggy Bottom." He wrote this review for Book World, the literary supplement of The Washington Post.

Linebackers Quit Game in Protest

By Robert Lipsyte

NEW YORK, June 2 (NYT). "Pro football is a stlly game," says Chip Oliver. "It dehumanizes people. They've taken the players and made them into slabs of beef that can charge around and hit each other. But where is their aesthetic soul; the feeling they can accomplish higher things?"

On his way to a higher consciousness, Oliver, an Oakland Raider linebacker, announced recently he was forsaking the game to live in a commune in Larkspur, Calif. McLaren, 32, Killed Testing Sports Car

GOODWOOD, England, June 2 (AP).-Bruce McLaren, one of the world's top ten racing drivers, was killed here today when he crashed at 180 miles an hour while testing an experimental car of his own design. The 32-year-old New Zealander, who won the coveted Canam (Cenada-America) scries last year in his own special racers, was among the wealthiest driver-designers in the sport.

McLaren spun out of control in a high-speed run at the Goodwood circuit and rammed an earth bank. His MD-8 sports car broke in two and exploded on impact. He was dragged clear but he died within minutes.

McLaren, who had been at the top of the big time in internetional motor racing for almost ten years, had been considering retiring from the track. As a builder of racing cars, he

WASHINGTON —Fantasy: CBS in the persons of Wallace and Harry Mike Reasoner is ringing your doorbell. Believe it or not. Your house has been chosen as the subject for one of those shows in which television cameras are conducted through the abodes of famous men. Your daughter m spouse seems to have knawn all along that Wallace and Reasoner were cam-

Baker ing. Daughters and spouses (why not spice?) never seem flustered when Reasoner and Wallace come barging in with their cameras.

Wallace's opening line—it's kind of you to let the country visit these rooms and corridors where Harold Spouse speuds so many of his waking and sleeping hours. Mrs. Soouse-is met with easy riposte. 'Please call me Masha, Mike. We doo't stand on formality in this Reasoner, looking about the entrance hall with his camera, is curious about a large mnund of shapelessness, atop which lies a pair of frayed, worn, malodorous tennis shoes, "My. that's a fascinating structure to have in your entrance hall. Masha," says Harry. "Is that an ancient burial mound, by any chance?

"Isn't that interesting?" your wife replies. "We built that our-selves. What we do, you see, is let the children, as they came into the house, get away with throwing anything they choose to take off on a small chair that's buried under there. If you dug into that mess right now, you'd probably find some scarves from last winter, several necktles, suit jackets, rubber boots, maybe an old turkey drumstick or two or a dented hubcap one of the boys school. Should we dig in and see what's there?"

Mike says that, as exciting as that would be, due to time limitations, they had better move into that room to the right. What happens in this rather depressing and gloomy little brown room. Mike asks. "I imagine the family getting tagether in here to receive had news.

Masha says this is the living room, which she herself personslly, without a single bit of advice from anybody, decorated herself, Harry, changing the subject, suggests she might like in show the television audience some objets d'art ar if not d'art, just some plain ald objets of special significance to the Masha says - she certainly would like to, but unfortunately there isn't much to show. Un-less, that is, the television audience would be interested in seeing some color slides of the family's summer vacation in Daytnua Beach.

Mike suggests there must be many interesting things in the cellar. They descend. Harry receives a brutal blow on the head as the result of walking into an awkwardly placed metal pine "Is there a story behind that pipe?" he inquires. "No," says Masha, "and be careful going through the laundry room. The slightest bit of pressure will knock that tub onto the floor and it's beavy enough to crush

"Of course not. Mike," "I wonder, Masha, if we could move on to the garage..."

Spring Cleaning

Crawling along like a flea-circus wagon on a basketball, these painters will spend two months spraying 1,250 gallons of paint (3 coats) on the 10,000 square-yard surface of the giant redome at Pleumeur-Bodon in Brittany. The radome, 50 yards high and 65 yards in diameter, covers a giant antenna that the French use for tracking and communicating with manmade satellites and the paint is a special formula that does not interfere with the radio and electronie transmissions.

PEOPLE:

"Cliff Richey," TV commentator Jean Raynal was saying yesterday afternoon, "is in incomparable physical condition." So much was evident as the scrappy little Texan bulled and clawed his way past top-seeded Hie Nastase to reach the semifinal round of the French Open tennis tournament. Less evident, though also figuring largely in the upset, was the condition of Cliff's psyche, which was hangin nice and loose as they say in Richey country. The metamorphosis of an extremely uptight kid into a personable young man of 23, Cliff was saving the other day, is partly due to his encounter last year with a book called "Psycho-Cybernetics" by Maxwell Maltz "When I was 14,15,16." Cliff said, "I thoroughly enjoyed playing tennis. Then I went out on the world tour and somehow I got off the track. I didn't like playing, I didn't like traveling. It was all a drag. The press was down ou me and I was down on myself. After Wimbledon last year I wanted to try to recapture the feeling I had when I was younger. I read the Maltz book. He's a plastic surgeon who treats the mind as well as the face. Ugly people would end up looking good but not really believing it. Like a kid in a math class who's failed a few times and gets in the habit. Even after be gets good at math he keeps failing. He has to live up to his negative image. Of course there's no reason to. The book stresses the recapture of your own best self-image." "Sort of like Norman Vincent Peale?" we asked. "There's a big difference," said Cliff. "Peale tells you to think positively, Maltz tells you how to think positively. Anyway, I'm back to enjoying tennis. Sure. I concentrate out there, but it's a game again." "And it doesn't bother you." we asked, "that all those years people were calling you a snotty little brat?" "Not really." said Cliff, flashing a Monday in Belgrade for a seven-day visit as a guest of President Tite. The centuriesold-barrier-crasher and her hus-band, Lord Snowdon, bave asked that official functions be kept to a minimum, but Yugoslavia, Reuters reports, "is obviously out to impress the princess and intends to show off modern school blocks, a community ceptre for flat residents, a massive building project in Belgrade, an iron-and-steel works and a workers' university." All of which sounds lightly less than swinging with the possible exception of that centre for flat resideots. Tito's answer to the worldwide bousing problem. Some of them, we bear, are really stacked.

Remember that wild Times calendar-watch that kept saying it was Feb. 31? Well, now it's hung up on the 27th of May, which was a pleasaut enough day, we'll admit, but not one we'd really like to carry around, with us for the rest of the year, Anyway, we'd just about decided to trade in the old ticker for a new job when a friend stopped us cold. "Hold onto that watch." he advised. "Saroe day it's going to be valuable." "How's that?" we asked. "Are you kidding," he said. "What is so rare as a May in June?"
